A friend spreads a nasty rumour about you. Will you forgive them? If you will, how would you go about it? Would it be different if you didn't like the person who spread the rumour?

The people around you use bad language. Will you join in to be like everyone else? If you choose not to, they might ask you why. What will you say?

You get undercharged at the shops. Do you point it out? If you give the extra money to charity rather than keep it yourself, does that make a difference?

There's one cupcake left. You've already had more than your brother, but he doesn't know that and offers you half. What do you do?

You accidentally break something but no-one saw it happen, so no-one knows it was you. What do you do?